

Access Plus Health: what we found, and how we would help

Prepared for your Marketing Operations Executor opening · September 17, 2026 · Public checks of accessplushealth.com

IN ONE PARAGRAPH

Access Plus Health has the foundation most companies are still missing when they hire this role: Tag Manager, a Google Ads tag and the Meta Pixel are already installed, and the blog is well indexed. The gaps we found are small search details. The page title is just the company name, and the sitemap lists template pages that were never meant for search. The real work in this role is what your post already names: tracking verified before ads launch, then GoHighLevel sequences that turn leads into pipeline.

WHAT IS ALREADY WORKING

- The Webflow site loads over HTTPS quickly on our check.
- Google Tag Manager, a Google Ads tag and the Meta Pixel are installed, and structured data is present.
- A sitemap with 285 addresses is referenced in robots.txt.
- Blog guides on collaborating physicians and NP and PA supervision appear in a public search of your domain.
- The meta description states the offer clearly, and Facebook, Instagram and LinkedIn are linked.

FINDINGS BY RISK

Page title	Medium	The homepage title tag is just "Access Plus Health". The title is the headline in search results. Telehealth licensing and medical directorship are what buyers search for, and they are not in it.
Sitemap	Low	The sitemap lists template pages: utility-pages/styleguide, utility-pages/changelog and utility-pages/licences. The styleguide page loads with no noindex tag. Template pages in the sitemap point search engines at pages with no value to a buyer. Removing them keeps the sitemap clean.
Headings	Low	The homepage has two H1 headings, one for businesses and one for physicians. One main heading makes the page's primary audience clear to search engines.
Image alt text	Low	23 of the 60 homepage images have no alt text. Alt text helps accessibility, which healthcare buyers notice.
Conversion events	Medium	The tags are installed, but from outside we cannot see which conversion events fire, or whether the Conversions API is connected. Your post says ads launch only after tracking is verified. That verification, event by event, is the step that decides whether ad spend can be judged.

WHAT WE WOULD DO FIRST

- Verify every conversion event, UTM and Conversions API connection before a single ad goes live.
- Build the GoHighLevel new lead, reactivation and newsletter sequences from your specs.
- Launch and manage Meta and Google campaigns from your structure, with budget checks every day.
- Run the founder's LinkedIn engagement and scheduling, and publish reviewed SEO articles.
- Send a one page weekly report: leads, cost per lead, email metrics and pipeline contribution.

A USEFUL WAY TO START

If you bring us on for this role, the first week includes a written tracking verification checklist covering every event, UTM and CAPI connection, at no extra cost.

WHO WE ARE

Balay ni Bruno & Co. is a small operational support studio. You hire one person and get a team behind them: websites, email, social content, CRM automation and reporting that all speak with one voice.

- For Freccia Construction, a custom builder in Austin, Texas, we fixed conversion tracking into their CRM and confirmed it worked before their Google Ads campaign went live this month.
- We build and maintain GoHighLevel CRM, email and workflows for Freccia Construction and JR Signing Services.
- RJ ran outbound LinkedIn prospecting at OMNI and served as Marketing Director at Top Producer Investment Capital.

HOW WE CHECKED

Checked from the outside on September 17, 2026: homepage code and headings, tracking tags, robots.txt and sitemap, structured data, image alt text, linked social profiles, a public site search of your domain. We did not log in to anything and we have no access to your analytics or ad accounts, so anything below marked not checked is exactly that.

- Your ad accounts, conversion events and Conversions API setup.
- Your GoHighLevel account and email performance.
- Page speed scores, because Google's PageSpeed service did not respond during our check.

RJ Bryan Tres Reyes

Founder, Balay ni Bruno & Co.